Mediterranean Elements in Continental Dobrogea orthopterofauna

C.S. Gabriel LUPU
Danube Delta National Institute, Babadag Street no. 165, 820112, Tulcea

Abstract:
As has been pointed out by various authors, a warming climate will inevitably cause changes in habitats in Europe, particularly in regions with climatic influence from south and in extreme north. Therefore, more changes in distribution of species can be anticipated. Without doubt, the current changes in the climate are providing plenty of opportunities for appearance of new orthoptera species that coming from south. The Mediterranean elements of orthopterofauna characterize in this way the Dobrogean Plateau.